Over 3,000 students voted Tuesday, as the first day of the ASBYU primary elections commenced. Voting continues until 5 p.m. today at seven different locations on campus.

Voting continues today

By D. PATRICK DENNY

The first day of ASBYU primary sions attracted over 3,000 students seven voting locations across pus Tuesday, taking elections ers a bit by surprise.

"We really weren't expecting this of a turnout," Paul Brown, elect committee chairman, said Tuesnight.

Past BYU elections are any indicaand the "procrastinators get to polls," Brown said, even more ts than Tuesday will be cast today e primaries conclude.

'great participation" by students, idates incognito and present ASBYU officers in manning voting booths allowed for the addition of three more locations in the Joseph Smith Building, the Smith Family Living Center and the quad between the Harold B. Lee Library and the Wilkinson Center. A lack of student volunteers had earlier reduced the number of voting locations planned for Tuesday and dampened hopes for one of the largest BYU voter turnouts in years.

The seven booths will remain in use today until the polls close at 5 p.m.

Brown said all primary election votes will be counted Thursday, a "rest day," in which campaigning will be suspended. Primary winners will be announced at 9 p.m. Thursday in 396 ELWC.

As of Tuesday night, 3,140 students had voted, Brown reported. The Harold B. Lee Library location led in total ballots cast with 754, followed by 692 at the Wilkinson Center and 582 at the quad.

Both candidates and campaigners put in a busy day Tuesday in attempts to animate potential voters. A helium balloon, a hanglider, a huge nylon camping tent and an omnibus were some of the props taking active parts in campaign procedures.

Following inquiries into the legality of their use, Brown said the candidates involved had special requests for use of the equipment approved nearly a month ago.

China, Vietnam may negotiate

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — China claimed victory over Vietnam on Tuesday, saying it had "exploded the myth of invincibility of this Asian Cuba." Vietnam disputed the Chinese claim, declared fighting was continuing, but said it was willing to negotiate once all Chinese troops have been withdrawn.

Vietnam also challenged China's announcement Monday that it has begun a withdrawal of troops from Vietnam. However, Vietnam's major ally, the Soviet Union, apparently accepted the Chinese declaration.

Vietnam said peace talks may begin at the vice foreign ministerial level after all Chinese troops have left Vietnam.

Director Phan Thi Minh of the Vietnamese foreign ministry, said contrary to Peking's announcement of troop withdrawal, "Chinese soldiers are still occupying a part of Vietnam's territory. Peking now talks about negotiations and a withdrawal of troops in an attempt to lure public opinion."

The Vietnamese foreign ministry, in a broadcast by the Voice of Vietnam, said Peking was forced to make the withdrawal announcement because of Vietnam's military strength, the Soviet Union's support of Vietnam, and objections to the war among the Chinese people. Mobilization reportedly was ordered in Vietnam, and the Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan called Tuesday for all Vietnamese to prepare to fight so that "every locality is a battlefield, every establishment a fortress and everybody a combatant."

It was reported in Moscow that Vietnam has ordered all foreign embassies in Hanoi to prepare evacuation plans and that a massive citywide effort was under way to dig shelters.

The Swedish Ambassador to Vietnam, Tom Tschernings, reached by telephone from Moscow by a Swedish correspondent, said the evacuation related orders were handed down Monday by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry. No reason for the orders was given, he said.

There was speculation among Western observers in Bangkok that the Vietnamese mobilzation might be a propaganda ploy to show Vietnam was not intimidated.

It appeared that Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev accepted the Chinese claim of withdrawal. He said, "Peking now declares that the Chinese troops that invaded the Socialist Republic of Vietnam are beginning to withdraw to within the boundaries of their country. Such a decision could be assessed as a sign of sobering up of the Chinese leaders, if carried out scrupulously."

He was quoted in a dispatch from Moscow by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

The Tass dispatch stressed that Russia would not be satisfied until all the Chinese units were withdrawn.

Meanwhile, Western intelligence sources in Bangkok said there have been no indications of sizable Chinese withdrawals following Peking's announcement Monday. But the analysts said that even with the best of intentions the withdrawal of tens of thousands of troops is difficult and requires careful planning and some time.

The Western sources add the Chinese have reinforced some of their positions in Vietnam.

The Voice of Vietnam said fighting continued Monday.

ROBERT K. THOMAS

While you're elected to represent students, you're not elected to de over the university," said rt K. Thomas, BYU academic president. "President Oaks des over the university and that t change."

BYU has to fight for credibility at ion time because students don't understand ASBYU's role. Faulty campaign promises, said ASBYU President Perry Bratt, have hurt ASBYU's credibility.

"A candidate can't just promise to change university programs and conditions," Bratt said. "He can promise to work for changes and present good ideas to the administration, but he can't guarantee the suggestions will be accepted."

Bratt said campaign promises such as directly changing the campus parking situation, changing the Health Center or the general education program, are unrealistic for an ASBYU candidate to make.

"Something that ASBYU definitely can do is present ideas to the administation, Provo and Orem cities, and other universities," Bratt said. "If a problem has been researched out well and a good program submitted to change a particular problem, the administration will consider it."

Bratt said the present ASBYU staff is constantly bombarding the administration with suggestions after they research out problems on campus.

BYU administrators have varied opinions about the role of student government. The differences allow the administration to have a dynamic, changing relationship with student government, Thomas said.

Basically the administration has a good working relationship with ASBYU, Thomas said, but problems arise when student officers try to overstep their authority.

"The administration has to consider university conditions over a long period of time, while ASBYU representatives are limited to one year," he said. "The one year limits them as far as long-range changes are concerned."

Another problem is that student government cannot be compared to other government forms people are familiar with.

"We search for comparisons but there aren't any," Thomas said. "Student government is not like anything else. Student government needs to develop its own identity."

Thomas said many student governments have had difficulty finding their proper identity. "In the '60s on college campuses, student unrest arose among students who tried to assume authority they didn't have."

Even with the limitations it has, Bratt said he felt BYU's student government was the most effective of all the campuses he has seen this year.

Scanner 'views' human anatomy

Editor's note: This is the first of three articles on new equipment and techniques used in the radiology department at Utah Valley Hospital.

By KIM HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The dream of every medical doctor is to have the ability to look inside the human body to detect disease. There was a time not many years ago when medical personnel at Utah Valley Hospital could rely only on conventional X-ray techniques to do their "seeing."

However, during the past 10 years, medical technologists have developed several kinds of sophisticated equipment which can be used to diagnose internal conditions.

About a year ago, UVH purchased a Computerized Axial Tomography Scanner, nicknamed CAT Scanner, for about $500,000. Manufactured by Pfizer Medical Systems in Columbia, Maryland, the CAT Scanner is used to produce a picture of a one-centimeter-thick slice of the human body.

Dr. E. Bruce McIff, chief of radiology at Utah Valley Hospital, says the CAT Scanner uses X-rays, but in a revolutionary new way.

"The radiation is passed through the patient's body from several different angles and strikes detectors which emit light," McIff says. "The light emitted by the detectors is picked up by photo multiplier tubes which change the light to language the computer can understand."

McIff says the computer then produces a picture of the body slice which was exposed to the X-rays. "The finished picture is a cross-sectional view of the body which is just extraordinary."

The pictures produced by the CAT Scanner are displayed in several different ways. A console allows the technician or doctor to view the pictures on a television screen. The pictures can also be recorded on video tapes and photographic film.

There are many advantages in using the CAT Scanner rather than conventional X-rays. Randy Ellsworth, special procedures supervisor at the hospital, says the obvious advantage is the cross-sectional view of the body rather than a front-to-back view.

"On a regular X-ray picture," Ellsworth says, "the organs of the body are superimposed on top of each other. The CAT Scanner separates everything and defines the tissues much more clearly."

Another advantage is the sensitivity of the system, which permits imaging of subtle variations in the density of anatomic structures and abnormalities. "This allows us to observe differences that occur on the cellular level of the tissues and not only in the gross structures," McIff says.

There have been many instances when the use of the CAT Scanner has prevented the need for exploratory surgery. McIff tells of a young trauma patient who had fractured both legs and had severe internal injuries. "The young man had just undergone surgery to remove his spleen when he began to complain of internal pain," McIff said.

"We wheeled him under the CAT Scanner and found a large mass where his spleen had been,"

Israel makes concessions

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel agreed to three compromises proposed by President Carter that may break through the barriers preventing an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, Israeli sources said Tuesday.

But the sources cautioned that other problems remain unsettled, and Egypt's response to the U.S. proposals will be pivotal to success.

The Carter trip was announced Monday in the wake of the president's talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. The president will arrive in Cairo Thursday and flies to Israel Saturday.

In New York, Begin was asked to compare his feelings now and at the time of last year's Camp David summit meeting. He replied: "There was euphoria, not only in this country, but in Jerusalem and Cairo and throughout the world. Now we must be very careful. I am hopeful." He spoke with reporters after arriving from Washington.

In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat met with U.S. National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski to hear the details of Carter's proposals. Sadat's reaction was not immediately known.

Sources with first-hand knowledge of the proposals, which have not been revealed, said they involved two compromises on linking the treaty to the Palestinian problem and a third on softening language about whether the treaty would supersede prior defense agreements.

Without disclosing the precise language of all the U.S. proposals, the sources outlined them as follows:

—Israel agrees to a 12-month nonbinding target date for completing negotiations on selfrule for the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

There is, however, no deadline for establishing autonomy, but Israel pledges to carry out the plan as quickly as possible.

—In a second point linking the treaty to the Palestinian problem, Israel agrees to language specifying that the treaty does not contradict the Camp David framework for a general Mideast peace.

A clause remains unchanged in the draft saying the treaty will be carried out "without regard to action or inaction by any other party and independently of any instrument external to this treaty."

Again, this adds a measure of "linkage" so important to Sadat without setting deadlines or penalties.

African Moslems massacred

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Rioting gangs murdered more than 800 Moslems over the weekend in one of Africa's bloodiest tribal massacres in recent years, officials of this north-central African nation reported.

The killings were in and around Chad's third-largest city, Moundou, some 300 miles south of the capital, N'Djamena. Moundou is in the heart of Chad's densely-populated southern region and most of its 45,000 inhabitants are Christian or Anamist blacks speaking French and local dialects. Anamists believe every object has a soul.

Poll shows majority favor draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Concerned about how well the volunteer army is working, Americans narrowly favor bringing back the draft for the armed forces, an Associated Press NBC News poll shows.

By a somewhat larger margin, the public backs the idea of universal public service for all young Americans.

Those Americans most vulnerable to a draft — those aged 18 to 24 — overwhelmingly oppose the idea of mandatory service in the armed forces.

The poll, taken Feb. 5-6, found 49 percent of the public supported reinstatement of the draft. Forty-three percent oppose such a move. Eight percent of the 1,600 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure.

Carter to lobby for hospital bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter pledged Tuesday to lead the fight against the hospital lobby and win passage of a hospital cost control bill that "offers us one of our best opportunities to bring down the rate of overall inflation."

JOSEPH A. CALIFANO

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano, Jr., who briefed reporters on the plan, said that over five years an average family of four could save $133 in insurance premiums, $37 in income taxes and $220 in Social Security payroll taxes through passage of the legislation.

The administration's compromise proposal, softened considerably since its defeat in the House last year, would give hospitals until the end of 1979 to slow rising costs or face mandatory federal ceilings.

Billy enters alcoholism center

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Billy Carter, the president's brother and the namesake of Billy Beer, was admitted to Long Beach Naval Hospital Tuesday for treatment of alcohol abuse, hospital officials said.

A brief written announcement by the hospital said only that Carter "has been admitted as a voluntary patient" and is under the care of Capt. Joseph Pursch, head of the alcohol abuse unit.

Pursch also was in charge of treating Georgia Sen. Herman Talmadge, who spent a month in the regional naval facility before being released last Monday.

Siamese twins to have surgery

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen are to undergo further surgery Wednesday aimed at the possible future separation of the infant girls joined at the head, a University of Utah Medical Center spokesman said.

Spokesman John Dwan said Wednesday's surgery is part of a series of surgical procedures and will involve tying off shared blood vessels, as was done during the twins' last round of surgery in January. He said the surgery is not planned as the final operation in the separation attempt.

Murder trial charges reduced

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Charges were reduced against three of four defendants in the death of polygamist leader Rulon Allred as jury selection began in their trial Tuesday.

On a motion from David Yocom, deputy Salt Lake County attorney, charges against Rena Chynoweth, 20, Mark Earl Chynoweth, 26, and Edward Marston, 23 — all followers of rival polygamist leader Ervil LeBaron — were reduced from first degree to second degree murder.

Iran's Islamic court to try exiled shah

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The exiled shah and his family will stand trial in absentia before an Islamic revolutionary court here for alleged "crimes against the Iranian people," the revolutionary government said Tuesday. Firing squads, meanwhile, executed nine more persons, seven for alleged sex offenses.

Abbas Amir Entezam, deputy prime minister, said during a news briefing that the trial will take place "in a few days, and following the court's decision, Iran will make fresh efforts to freeze royal family holdings held in Swiss banks."

The site of the trial and specific charges against the deposed monarch have not been disclosed. Following the revolutionary government's ascension to power Feb. 12, however, government spokesmen spoke of trying the shah in Tehran's 100,000-capacity soccer stadium for treason, corruption and illegal transferring of funds abroad.

The shah fled Iran about a month before an Islamic peoples revolution toppled his 2,500-year-old monarchy. He presently lives in exile in Morocco.

Islamic revolutionary firing squads in Tehran and elsewhere executed nine more persons within a 36-hour period, seven of them for sodomy, while a couple caught committing adultery was publicly flogged at the Caspian Sea resort town of Jamshid Abad.

Local press reports said Tuesday that three men were shot in Shiraz, about 630 miles south of Tehran, for sodomy. One was an Afghani immigrant.

he said. "After locating the position of the mass with the scanner, we inserted a tube allowing the mass to drain."

McIff says without the scanner, doctors would have had to perform surgery without the knowledge of what they were looking for.

The amount of radiation the patient receives through the CAT Scanner is about the same as with a conventional X-ray machine. "For example," McIff says, "an entire brain-scan series compares favorably with conventional X-ray series of the brain. It is slightly more, but not a great deal." McIff says the radiation amounts are monitored by the computer and the beams are carefully restricted.

According to Ellsworth the scanner at UVH is the only one of its kind in Utah and one of the most sophisticated scanners in the country. "The picture production is excellent," he says.

An average of 10 patients a day are examined by the Scanner. Ellsworth says it takes about one hour to do a scan on a patient. Most of the examinations performed by the CAT Scanner are scans of the head which are used to locate and identify tumors or other abnormalities. Ellsworth says about 10 percent of the scans are abdominal.

A photo taken by the new scanner shows a one centimeter thick slice of a human abdomen.

The field of computerized tomography is rapidly expanding. "The software on our machine has been updated three times in the last year," Ellsworth says. "These new computer programs are allowing us to do more and more with the scanner."

•Bratt says campaigners can't guarantee proposals

"In conferences with other universities, we are often asked how we get so many students to participate in our activities," Bratt said. "Many other universities can have activities such as dances only a couple of times a year because students won't participate. BYU holds dances almost every week."

Although student apathy is present at BYU during elections, BYU students vote at a much higher rate than students at other universities, Bratt said. In the 1977 student election, 40 percent of the studentbody voted. Last year, the voting percentage dropped to 24 percent, but this still compared favorably to the 8 percent at the University of Utah.

"Most universities have trouble getting 10 percent of their students to vote," Bratt said.

"We need quality candidates for ASBYU because the officers represent BYU to the world," he said. "The candidates need to be ready to represent the university. The students need to realize the kind of officers they elect will reflect BYU students."

He said this year's ASBYU officers represented BYU to such dignitaries as former president Gerald Ford, columnists Jack Anderson and George Will, and all the LDS Church leaders who visit campus.

"I hope students will look at the candidate and not just the campaign when they go to vote," Bratt said. "Friendliness and personality is only part of a candidate. He needs to be able to do the job over the year."

'Truths' not true, says economist

DR. THOMAS SOWELL ... economic problems of minority groups are not always caused by moral problems.

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

There are many accepted "truths" about minorities that are not at all true, said Dr. Thomas Sowell in his forum address Tuesday in which he discussed "myths about minorities."

The UCLA economics professor quoted Will Rogers' statement, "Ignorance is not so bad as all that we know that is not true," explaining that many myths exist about the minorities' economic situation in America today.

Some of these myths, said Sowell, are that minorities were excluded from the professions, that there are educational gaps between minorities and non-minorities, and that there has been an increase in minority crime. He said these are all beliefs that are "not totally true."

He said some of the misconceptions about minorities exist because there is no defined line between minorities in America. "Half of America's population cannot identify itself ethnically," he said. "The melting pot theory was abandoned just at the time when there is unprecedented evidence it existed."

Sowell listed statistics and historical comparisons supporting his assertion that the beliefs he mentioned were not completely true.

"There are a number of non-white groups that are over-represented in the professional groups," he said.

"Crime has increased since the 1960s but never reached the levels of the 1870s," Sowell said. The professor said 10 percent of the Los Angeles area people were murdered yearly in the 19th century, and in comparison with history, today's violence is not quite so bad.

Sowell said there are reasons for the economic problems of minorities but they are not always the moral reasons people like to use to explain all the problems.

"Age is one of the most obvious factors that is rarely discussed," Sowell said. He pointed out that minority groups have a much lower median age and this explains many of their economic problems.

"Younger people commit the majority of crimes and those groups with a higher number of younger people are going to have higher statistical crime rates," he explained.

The age factor also explains why minorities seem to have lower incomes, why limited numbers are in professional positions, and why they seem to have a higher unemployment rate.

Downtown hotel 'close to reality' hotel catering to businessmen and conventions is close to y for downtown Provo.

e hotel will be affiliated with a major hotel chain, said Ron sen, Provo community development director. The developers ow awaiting written commitment from the chain.

e final architect's rendering of plans for the facility has dy been released. "We hope to break ground by mid-summer, st or September at the latest," said John Olsen, a partner in developing firm. Once construction begins, it will take a mum of 18 months to complete the project.

e hotel, which is being developed by Provo Plaza Develop-, Inc., will be located on West Center Street and 100 North.

e hotel plans include an athletic club facility housing tennis aquetball courts, a swimming pool and other facilities, which e open to the public as well as hotel guests, Olsen said.

e felt that the downtown athletic club would serve two func-," Olsen said. "It will serve people in the downtown area, plus ailable for guests of the hotel."

e athletic facility would operate on a user's fee rather than any of membership arrangement, Olsen said.

One item not yet settled centers around funding for the parking structure to be located adjacent to the hotel. "Alternatives are being considered," Madsen said. "We'll gather the costs for the different methods and then make a decision."

The parking structure will be a public facility, as well as providing parking for hotel guests. Madsen said it has not been decided if the public will be required to pay a parking fee. More likely some sort of a validation system, such as parking stickers, will be used.

Funding for some proposed meeting rooms also has not been decided yet. "We've considered making them public rooms and we've also considered making them private," Madsen said. "There are advantages and disadvantages both ways.

"A lot of cities build convention facilities and own or subsidize them. We don't want to be in that position. We want them to build, operate and maintain it."

Madsen said the developers have been formulating cost estimates to submit to community development on funding alternatives for both the parking structure and the meeting rooms.

Olsen said the next step will be to determine a time schedule coordinating the use of public and private funds.

Orem City meets on developments

An informal get-together with homeowners from the Excutive Estates Develpment preceded the Orem City Council meeting Tuesday. The council passed a resolution concerning business licences.

Last week the homeowners interrupted the council meeting. They wanted to voice disappointment for the conditions of streets in their development. Mayor James E. Mangum chose not to hear their complaints at that time as they were not on the agenda, although he later said if they had remained after the meeting he would have heard them.

Mangum had the Jack Jones, the city public works director, as well as construction companies and the developer in attendance Tuesday night to hear the homeowner's complaints.

The homeowners expressed concern for streets, sidewalks, drainage, fences, and soil problems. Blame for the conditions was not clearly defined during the meeting, although it became apparent it was shared by developers, construction companies, and utilities.

"The city is going to have to step in and coordinate what is done," Mangum said at the conclusion of the meeting.

Immediately after the homeowner's meeting the city council met. They passed a resolution returning 24 percent of each business license fee after the minimum base of $12.

Businesses which apply for a license at the present time will be given a 24 percent discount.

Power use study may alter rates

A re-evaluation of the rates charged to customers of Provo Power will be conducted by the Provo Power board. The study will involve determining what percent of power various sectors of the community use; what the percent of profit received back from that group is; and then recommending that rates be adjusted accordingly.

Various segments of the community buy their power at different rates because of the returns they give to Provo Power. Some of the divisions of customers are: residential, commercial lighting, BYU and Utah Valley Hospital, and irrigation and soil drainage.

Currently, BYU is buying power for slightly less than it costs Provo Power to supply it, Bud Bonnet, director of Provo Power, said. "We are selling power to BYU for less than average system cost, but to get a true picture, the percent of our income they return to us must be considered," he said.

BYU uses 24 percent of Provo's power, but it contributes 21 percent of the profit. The university is charged one of the lowest prices for power because of the relatively inexpensive cost of supplying power to it, Bonnet said. Operating expenses such as distribution, sales promotion, customer accounting and collection, and administration don't apply to BYU, he said.

Purchase, production, and transmission of power are the major expenses for supplying power to BYU, Bonnet said.

LDS and media to be discussed

Three prominent LDS communicators will discuss "Mormons and Media" Thursday at 10 a.m. in the Varsity Theater, ELWC.

WILLIAM BURCH

Burch has had extensive experience in the field of electronic media. He has been producerirector of the Big Three Golf Series, the Indianapolis 500 closed-circuit telecast, the Tennessee Ernie Ford Show and many Ralph Edwards productions.

Mortenson has been with KSHO-TV in Las Vegas for the past year. Prior to that time he spent five years as president of the Hughes Television Network, a division of the Howard Hughes-owned Summa Corporation.

Madsen, in addition to his duties with Bonneville International, is chairman of the United Press International Broadcast Advisory Board.

Single parents group offers family activities

By DEANA LLOYD
Universe Staff Writer

Single parents face many problems, including loneliness, isolation and coping with their children. Solutions to these problems can be found in Parents Without Partners (PWP), a non-sectarian, non-profit organizations that provides an educational and social outlet for single parents and their children.

"We are for the single parent — divorced, widowed or never married," Provo chapter president Linda Bowers said. "We are family oriented, with educational and family activities for our members.

"We have gotten the name of a swinging singles group, but we're not. Some people have met in the group and married, but that isn't our main purpose."

"People who are very religious have been leery of us because of the swinging singles image," she said. "The ones who aren't as religious find we sometimes don't meet their needs because we are so family oriented."

Examples of activities the group has during the month include a skating party, dances in Salt Lake City and meetings with guest speakers. The Provo chapter is small with only 28 members, while the Salt Lake chapter is the largest in the state with about 400 members. Utah has two other chapter of PWP, one in Ogden and another in Tooele.

"I would like to see our chapter grow," Mrs. Bowers said. "There are a lot of divorced people in Utah County. The first step they need to take is wanting to find someone to share their problems with.

"The Salt Lake chapter has activities scheduled on their calendar every day," Mrs. Bowers continued. "I would like to see us grow to where we have a large turn out and can have a larger number of activities to appeal to a larger number of people."

"We don't claim to be the answer to everyone's problem," she said. "But it is nice to have someone you can call if you are low or want to go somewhere. It is having someone to share in closeness and friendship."

Mrs. Bowers said divorced or widowed persons often find themselves without friends. "People who were your friends when you were married now are afraid you will be a threat to their home."

Single parents also find their time restricted and find their personal interests competing with their children's needs. "Many times after the divorce or death you try to overcompensate and find yourself rewarding the child when you shouldn't," Mrs. Bowers said.

Single parents do not need to have custody of their children to be eligible for PWP membership. Mrs. Bowers said the important thing is the common bond of concern for the welfare of the children.

While some of the male members of the group have custody of their children, many don't. Having male members gives the children a chance to have the male influence in their life that they might miss, said Mrs. Bowers.

PWP sponsors a teen group, International Youth Conference (IYC), for the children of single parents. "Our local group is really close," Mrs. Bowers said. "The kids find out they are not alone. It gives them a chance to share problems and ideas with each other."

The PWP sponsors an orientation meeting on the eighth of each month for new members and those interested in the organization. For more information contact Mrs. Bowers at 785-4780 or Lee Phillips at 224-4106.

Y student journal places nationally

The BYU student journal, Century 2, has been awarded a second place prize in competition among all college and student journals across the country.

Richard Larson, editor of the BYU publication, said the award of $200 will go toward the publication of the next journal.

The BYU journal received the award for its directness and honesty. The judging committee said the journal was in "perfect bound format." Century 2 was acknowledged for its directness and honesty, its widespread community concern in art, history and religion, and its strong sense of place and point of view.

Boise State was awarded first place and Columbia University placed behind BYU in third place.

"We're pleased," Larson said, "that we were able to place so well in competition since it is only our second year of publication."

"We try to take an eclectic approach," Larson said. "We try to include the best of everything. Century 2 is a good opportunity for students to get their quality articles published."

The journal began with 400 subscribers and now has nearly 1,600 subscribers, Larson said. Originally, Century 2 was a monthly publication, but now the magazine is published twice a semester in the fall and winter because of limited funds and the time volunteers can spend on the publication.

CLA, seeded first in the NCAA's Regional, received 1,007 points. Bruins, 23-4, won the Pac-10 title week with victories over California Stanford.

rth Carolina, number seven last , jumped to number three with 1,- points after winning the Atlantic t Conference title and earning the ber one seed in the NCAA's East nal with a 71-63 triumph over on Saturday.

g Ten co-champion Michigan remained number four with 932 s, followed by Notre Dame, num- wo last week but upset by both ul and Michigan, with 850 points. Irish were seeded number one in NCAA's Mideast Regional.

ke slipped one notch to sixth with points — 13 more than Southwest erence champion Arkansas, num- 0 last week.

Paul, unranked three weeks ago 15th last week, continued its rapid moving to number eight and 678 s.

uisiana State and Syracuse roun- out the Top 10, the Tigers, with points, edging the Orangemen by points.

orgetown, which defeated cuse 66-58 last Saturday, headed second 10 with 556 points. The s were followed by Marquette, ble, Iowa, Texas, Purdue, Detroit, Louisville, San Francisco and Southeastern Conference champion Tennessee, the only newcomer to this week's Top 20, replacing Ohio State.

Every member of the Top 20 except Purdue will play in the NCAA tournament, which will determine the national champion. The Boilermakers will play in the National Invitational Tournament.

The AP's final poll of the season will be conducted next week.

Aztec mentor fired for illegal recruiting

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tim Vezie has been dumped as head basketball coach at San Diego State University three days after some former players made allegations of recruiting violations against Vezie and his coaching staff.

Dr. Ken Karr, athletic director, denied Monday that Vezie's dismissal had anything to do with the charges. He said university president Dr. Thomas B. Day agreed with his recommendation that Vezie not be rehired following a "normal end of season evaluation."

Day ordered an internal investigation Friday into the allegations made by four former players - Dan Teague, Will Connelly, Howard Avery and Presnell Gilbert, all of whom are black.

Among the allegations were that some athletes received under-the-table cash payments, free lodging and transportation and other favors from Aztec coaches and unnamed "alumni," and that at least one was given academic credit for a summer class he never attended.

There had been publicized unrest among black players in past seasons, although six blacks remained on this year's squad after Hilton Hale quit and Gilbert was declared academically ineligible.

Symphony features violinist

Henri Temianka, famed violinist, will perform the "Mozart Violin Concerto No. 5" with the Utah Valley Symphony tonight at 8 in the Provo Tabernacle. This will be Temianka's first Utah concerto performance with an orchestra.

Felix Mendelssohn's "Fingals Cave Overture," and "Symphony No. 1 in G Minor" by the Russian 19th century composer Vassili Kalinnikov will also be performed.

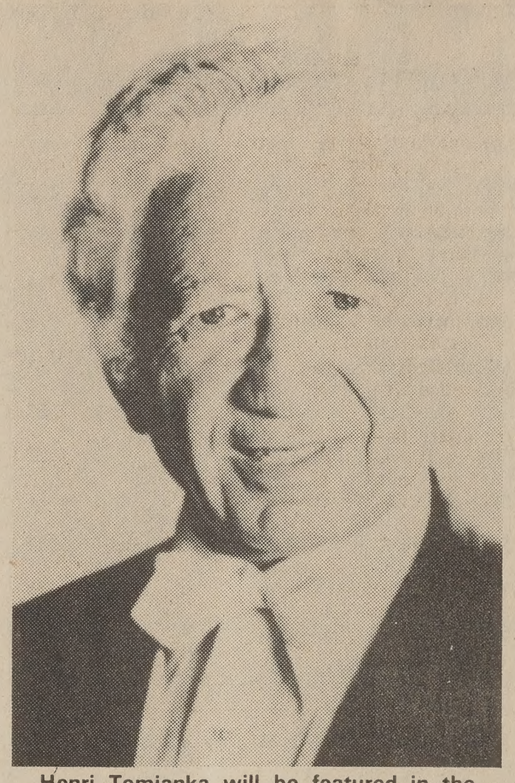
Temianka, founder and leader of the celebrated Paganini Quartet, was born in Scotland and gave his first concert at the age of seven. He studied in Holland, at the National Conservatories of Berlin and Paris, and graduated from Curtis Institute in Philadelphia as conductor and violinist under Artur Rodzinsi and Carl Flesch. Recently he returned to Curtis to teach master classes.

The violinist has appeared with major orchestras throughout Europe and America under Reiner, Monteux, Szell, Barbirolli, Mitropoulos, Boult, Sir Henry Wood, Steinberg, and others. He has made joint appearances with Prokofieff, Milhaud, Copeland and Vaughn Williams in recitals and festivals dedicated to their music. He has made recordings for RCA, Columbia Decca, and current solo recordings by Orion.

Temianka is noted not only for his talent as a musician and teacher, but also for his warm concern for each of his pupils.

In the past 22 years Temianka has frequently been a visitor and performer in the Utah Valley area, coming first to Provo in 1947 when he brought the Paganini Quartet to the BYU campus. He has also appeared as lecturer and private teacher at BYU, as well as participating in the making of a motion picture film.

Following Wednesday night's concert, a reception honoring Temianka will be held across the street from the tabernacle in the Utah County Courthouse.



Henri Temianka will be featured in the Utah Valley Symphony concert tonight at 8. Temianka is a famed violinist who has appeared with many symphonies nationally.

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or senior majoring in sciences like math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll get an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs both in the Navy and out.

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus, or contact your Navy representative at 800-841-8000, or send in the coupon. The NUPOC-C Program. Not only can it help you complete college. It can be the start of an exciting career.

Communications Week

'Battlestar' producer lectures

By MARCI JUDD & SUSANNE MEILSOE
Universe Staff Writers

Glen Larson, executive producer of "Battlestar Galactica," delivered the keynote address for BYU's Communications Week Tuesday afternoon, speaking to a capacity crowd in the ELWC Ballroom.

The former singer and songwriter told students he got his start in broadcasting as a young boy, putting on radio shows in his garage and using microphones sculpted from clay.

Larson contrasted his early experiences with more recent production accomplishments, listing numerous television serials he has produced, including such shows as "Alias Smith and Jones," "Switch," "McCloud," "Quincy," and "The Hardy Boys."

A member of the Westwood Ward in Los Angeles, Larson jokingly told the audience that television is a terrific business to be in "as long as you don't want to live much past 45.

"The urge to talk to millions of people at once is what draws most of us to this industry," said Larson. "For some, it's just the excitement of being around the cameras and equipment."

Larson described the chaos that is creeping into television entertainment, resulting in the falling apart of series that rely on "instant talent."

To emphasize the spontaneity of television production, Larson related an experience with 'Battlestar Galactica' two weeks ago.

"That particular show started as a one hour production, and 10 days before it was to air, the network decided to lengthen it to two hours. So I sat down and wrote a script that we could tack on the end of the first hour.

"We didn't finish it until about five Sunday morning, after which the sound track and video were taped and sent by satellite to New York to be put together with commercials to be aired that same night.

"I make a living by sending in bloopers to the 'National Enquirer'," Larson jokingly said. "I make the mistakes, and then report them."

Speaking to broadcasting majors earlier Tuesday in the KBYU studios, Larson urged the students to keep going.

"If you really want to be in this business bad enough, you can make it," he said.

Solons 'can' cliches

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A group of shocked and appalled legislators announced this week that it was time to get a handle on jargon.

The ad hoc House Select Committee on Suppression of Jargon issued a preliminary report defining the parameters of the verbiage dispute.

After seeking input about the cliche syndrome, the legislators decided to bite the bullet and ban jargon from March 5-9.

The report listed a veritable plethora of phrases no longer viable because they have been run up the flagpole so many times.

"The committee has listened with growing concern to the proliferation of jargon in and around the state capitol," the committee report said.

Land developer to present 'inside look' at real estate

Joy R. Dunyon, a BYU graduate, land developer, general contractor and real estate broker will give an inside look at land development in the Utah Valley, and will explain how to become successful in these fields at 4 p.m. today in 184 JKB.

Dunyon is the owner of the construction and development firm Joyco, Inc. He also has numerous other investments throughout Utah Valley, such as Joy Dunyon and Associates, Terra Management Systems, J.F. Dunyon Co. and Woodstone Real Estate.

His company and affiliates have built more than 150 houses, apartments and offices in Salt Lake and Utah counties. The company owns 174 apartments, office suites, warehouses, farms and condominiums. They also manage under contract more than 300 apartments, office suites, warehouses, farms and condominiums.

Along with these they own 55 apartments, houses, offices and warehouses and presently have three branches of a real estate brokerage - Sandy, Granger and Commercial.

Dunyon's lecture is part of the executive lecture series sponsored by the BYU School of Management.

Legal rights of children topic of law symposium

The legal rights of children will be discussed by two leading law scholars and others interested in the changing role of children Thursday and Friday in the Moot Court Room, JRCB.

The participants in the conference include author and law professor Robert H. Mnookin from the University of California and the president of Ricks College, Bruce C. Hafen.

The symposium, "Children's Rights: The Child, the Family and the State," is sponsored by the Associated Women Law Students of the BYU Law School. Margaret Woodworth, president of the women students' organization, said the International Year of the Child has focused public attention on the rights to which children are entitled.

At 10 a.m. Thursday in the Moot Court Room, JRCB, a panel discussion will focus on the state's role as protector of children. Panel members include Judge Kent Bachman of the first District Juvenile Court; Moyne Oviatt, a psychotherapist; and David E. Litchfield, a Salt Lake City attorney.

Mnookin will address the symposium at noon Friday in the Moot Court Room on child custody, legal rights and the relationship between legal standards and social values. At 1 p.m. Hafen will discuss the legal trends of applying individual rights to the family setting.

Mnookin has been a visiting fellow of the Center for Sociolegal Studies at Oxford University in England. He was also director of the Earl Warren Legal Institute's childhood and government project at the University of California. He was a Fulbright Scholar and served as law clerk to U.S. Supreme Court Justice John Harlan.

Mnookin is author of "Child, Family and State: Problems and Materials on Children and the Law."

Hafen has been professor of law at BYU and director of evaluation and planning for the LDS Church. He is a graduate of the University of Utah School of Law and has lectured and written on the legal rights of children.

At-a-Glance

Stars lecture

The evolution of the stars will be discussed in the Summerhays Planetarium at BYU at 7:30 p.m. and again at 8:30 p.m. by Dr. D. Harold McNamara of the physics and astronomy department. The birth of stars and the processes that go on in a stellar interior to change its physical characteristics will be discussed. There is a small admission fee.

Pre-med, pre-dental

Pre-medical and pre-dental students who will apply for the entering class of 1980 must be interviewed by the pre-medical committee before April 13. Contact Anne in the pre-professional office, 491 WIDB, ext. 3044, for details.

Problem solving lab

The Communications Lab is sponsoring a lecture "Problem Solving" Thursday from 10 to 11 a.m. in 110 ELWC. Dr. Eric Stephan, professor of communications is the speaker.

Air quality seminar

A joint seminar of the the physics, geology and chemistry departments will feature Briant L. Davis, professor of geophysics at the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. The lecture, "Use of X-Ray Diffreaction in Air Quality Studies" will be given at 4:10 p.m. today in 241 ESC.

Mark Twain studied

"Mark Twain: The Essence of His Wit and Wisdom" will be discussed by Dr. Richard H. Cracroft at the BYU Alumni College tonight at 8 in the Alumni House. Cracroft is chairman of BYU's English Department. The Alumni College is an informal, noncredit series open to all BYU alumni, friends, parents and students. There is a charge for admission.

Defensive driving course

The Campus Safety Office in conjunction with Training and Development is accepting names for participation in this semester's Defensive Driving course. This eight-hour course will be taught in two-hour sessions once each week. The course is for all university employees who drive university vehicles in the course of their jobs. Full-time and part-time employees should attend. Names of those recommended to attend should be forwarded to Training and Development by department heads today. Call ext. 5012 for further information.

Honors students

All Honors students should pick up the March Newsletter in 4012 HBLL immediately. They should also purchase tickets for the play "For the Lions to Win" for the March 24 performance. There will be a discussion of the play with the director, Dr. Tom Rogers, at 6:30 p.m. in F-201, HFAC.

Contest deadline

The deadline for submissions to the James E. Talmage Scientific Writing Contest is Thursday. Papers are to exhibit mature research and writing and may treat any area of natural scientific investigation. Papers should be submitted to the secretaries in the Honors Office by 5 p.m. Last year's winners were: first place ($50) Lewis A. Hassess; second place ($25) Michael A. Bowers and third place ($10) Blaine Bartholomew.

Women's career options topic of discussion today

The pros and cons of women entering non-traditional fields will be the subject of a panel discussion today.

Dr. Maren Mouritsen, assistant dean of student life, will speak at the discussion, sponsored by the ASBYU Women's Office and Honors Program, today at 4:10 p.m. in 321 ELWC. Wallis Ashcroft, civil engineering major; Alison Davis, economics major; Tracy Ensign, mathematics major; and Jenine Wanliss, elementary education graduate, will speak on experiences in their fields.

Susan Paxman, vice president of the ASBYU Women's Office, said the purpose of the discussion is to "let women know these options are open to them," and to "create a support system for those women in the non-traditional fields who sometimes do not receive support from men and faculty in their majors."

After the discussion there will be an open house where information will be available on these majors.

otentially disastrous

Floods likely in Provo

By MARGARET WILSON
Universe Staff Writer

torrent of mud rolled out of Rock yon yesterday afternoon and even- sweeping away part of the flood rol dam, and pouring black waves t and slime over a dozen farms in Pleasant View region.

day as ranchers in the path of the waded in knee-deep mud to ge farm equipment and collect ock, the damage to crops, land buildings was estimated at $20,- e above disaster, described in a local newspaper, occurred in July, 1936, 43 years ago. But Provo still faces a potentially disastrous flooding problem.

Area floods are generally caused by the overflow of the Provo River and high stages of Utah Lake, as well as summer cloudbursts in Slate, Little Rock, and Rock Canyons.

"Provo was identified as a serious flood area..."

High intensity storms

A major concern throughout the years has been the high intensity summer storms (cloudbursts) which commonly occur in the canyon areas. Many residents of Rock Canyon have been particularly concerned because Rock Canyon is classified as a "critical watershed" since its runoff is greater than its drainage area can handle.

According to a 1978 flood insurance study, Rock Canyon, which is predicted to have a 10-year storm discharge of 865 cubic feet per second, has only a 9.4 square mile drainage area.

Conversely, Provo Canyon, which produces 1800 cubic feet of discharge per second on a 10-year storm level basis, has a 680 square mile drainage area. This drainage area is 68 times greater than Rock Canyon's and produces only slightly double its amount of discharge.

Heritage Mountain

According to a 1978 Environmental Impact Statement, Heritage Mountain ski resort plans to convert 900 acres of land into ski runs. This conversion of trees into brush and grass in order to build the ski resort will, the statement says, increase runoff in a high intensity summer storm by 74 percent. The majority of the proposed ski runs are planned for the Rock Canyon area.

Assuming the Environmental Impact Statement is accurate, many Provo residents feel they will be faced with "heavy summer flooding which flood insurance will only begin to compensate."

Roe Allman, a civil engineer for the Bureau of Reclamation, feels differently about the increased flood possibilities in the canyon areas caused by the construction of the ski resort.

"By clearing the land of the trees, flooding could measurably increase, granted, but not to any mammoth proportions," he said.

Flood insurance

In 1968, the Congress passed a national flood insurance act which made flood insurance available to homeowners in the flood plain area. "Provo was identified as a serious flood area in 1971 and 1972," said Alfred S. Mickelsen, Provo Zoning Enforcement employee.

It wasn't until 1975 that Provo was accepted into the National Emergency Flood Insurance phase. Provo was covered under this emergency program until Feb. 1, 1979.

A Feb. 7 article published in The Salt Lake Tribune stated that Provo faces suspension from the flood insurance program unless it complies with federal rules. However, Mickelsen said Provo was re-evaluated for flood insurance coverage in August 1978 and is now covered under the regular flood insurance program.

"The only difference between the emergency program and the regular program of flood insurance is the emergency program offers a subsidized rate to homeowners, which is approximately half the cost," Mickelsen said.

Stepping stone

The emergency program is no longer valid for Provo because it functions only as a "stepping stone" to get on the regular flood insurance program, Mickelsen said.

According to a flood insurance study, Provo has constructed levees along the Provo River to avoid high peak flows from the river, but no protection is provided by levees from Utah Lake flooding.

"Provo River does have some flooding problems but it generally maintains its water," Allman said. He added that Provo River has a one percent chance of flooding every year.

"However, the Utah Lake region has much greater potential for flooding and does flood frequently, sometimes even as far as the airport," Allman said. But he said the airport has taken precautions to insure that the flooding doesn't affect its service to the valley.

Recommendations released

Recommendations were released on Feb. 27 to all citizens within the cities and unincorporated areas of Utah County by the Utah Flood Control department.

It was recommended that individual neighborhoods with recurring flood problems organize themselves and take an inventory of available equipment that could be used to respond to localized problems. It was also suggested that the citizens inform local flood control agency of their situation and of actions being taken to control or eliminate the problem.

The cities included in the Flood Control report are Alpine, American Fork, Lehi, Mapleton, Orem, Payson, Pleasant Grove, Provo, Salem, Santaquin, Spanish Fork, Springville and unincorported County areas. A list with the names of the person or persons to contact for each city in case of emergency is available from either the Utah County Flood Control Center or Utah County Civil Defense Center.

This picture of a Provo park, taken in 1975, is evidence of the type of flooding which can occur in canyon areas.

A hanging bridge?

Go hang a bridge from those mountains.

That is what BYU civil engineering professor D. Allan Firmage told T.Y. Lin International, an engineering consulting firm out of the San Francisco area. Firmage is shown here looking over documents related to the "Ruck-A-Chucky," a hanging arch bridge which he helped design for the firm The bridge will span the Auburn Dam in Northern California.

"Progressive Architecture Magazine" awarded the new design first place in its annual contest, the first time a bridge design has ever won the contest.

Firmage, a specialist in bridge design, has co-authored a text, "Design of Modern Steel Highway Bridges," which will be used in civil engineering classes around the country.

Church genealogy leader to receive service award

The BYU College of Social Sciences' Distinguished Service Award for 1979 will be given to George H. Fudge, managing director of the Genealogical Department for the LDS Church.

The award will be presented at the college's annual banquet tonight, according to Dr. Martin B. Hickman, dean of the BYU College of Social Sciences.

"The (LDS Church) microfilming program, which is directly under the supervision of George Fudge, is considered to be the greatest program for records preservation and the making of records more widely available that the world has ever known. Much of the credit for the success of this unprecedented program is due to George H. Fudge," Hickman said.

Fudge, a native of England, served in that country's armed forces during World War II and later immigrated to the United States. Before leaving England, he had become the first microfilm operator for the LDS Church in England.

"During the past 30 years, Fudge has been more directly involved in the microfilming program of the church than any other person," Hickman said. "Today, there are more than 110 microfilm cameras operating in many countries in the world. There are more than a million rolls of microfilm in the collection at the present time, and more than 50,000 rolls are being added each year."

In addition to his role in the church's genealogical operations, Fudge has held several other leadership positions.

Professor at Y to lead mission

Robert H. Daines, III, BYU professor of business management, is one of six men from Brazil, Japan, California and Utah called to serve as mission presidents for the LDS Church, the First Presidency announced.

The others are Harry Eduardo Klein, Sao Paulo, Brazil; Clyde T. Lowe, Spanish Fork; Ryo Okamoto, Tokyo, Japan; H. Von Packard, Carlsbad, Calif., and Roy I. Tsuya, Sandy.

Their specific assignments will be announced at a later date, church officials said. They will assume their new responsibilities in July after attending a seminar in Salt Lake City.

inger widow files claim gainst Utah officials

e state of Utah, nit County and 21 med individuals listed in a $5.6 n claim filed Mon- by the widow of Singer.

kie Singer signed notice filed by her ney, Stephen R. and, according to rticle in Tuesday's Lake Tribune.

e document was itted to Lt. Gov. David S. Monson to be referred to the State Board of Examiners. The board processes any claims filed against the state and then if payment is recommended they refer the claims to the state legislature.

Mr. Singer was shot to death Jan. 18 in a confrontation with 10 law enforcement officers at his Marion, Utah, farm.

The claim states, "all of said agents acting in concert and each of them, caused the wrongful death of Hans Gunther (John) Singer; and that such wrongful death was the result of malice, willful and wanton negligence, negligent supervision, excessive use of force and violation of the civil rights of the deceased and other claimants (named) herein."

The agents referred to in the claim are the state, Summit County, Gov. Scott M. Matheson, State Public Safety Commissioner Larry Lunnen, Summit County Commissioners Carl T. Ovard, Ralph William Wallin and Gerald E. Young, and Summit County Sheriff Ron Robinson.

The Board of Examiners will now draft a recommendation that will be sent, with the petition, to the 1980 budget session. The legislators will then decide the fate of the petition and will not be bound to the examiners' recommendation.

Couple contributes $24,768 to museum

The Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum at BYU has received a contribution of $24,768 from a Spanish Fork couple, according to Donald T. Nelson, director of the LDS Church Development Office.

Dr. Preston Hughes and his wife Maurine added the money to the Hughes Family Endowment Fund, which they established in 1977 with an initial contribution of $21,466.

Income from the fund will be used to maintain the Museum's herbarium, support research projects and provide fellowships and scholarships for needy students.

"This gift by Hughes and his wife brings the amount in the fund to over $46,000," said Dr. Wilmer W. Tanner, museum director. "We are grateful for the thoughtful, generous support of the Hughes family."

Space trip no big thrill?

NEW YORK (AP) — Science-fiction writer Isaac Asimov would rather make a fast buck than take a fast trip into outer space.

Asimov, asked Wednesday if he would accept a ticket on a space shuttle, replied, "If they offered me a ticket, sure I'd take it — and sell it for whatever I could get."

U.S. oil dependency: solution of high price

It has been more than two years since President Carter called the energy crisis the moral equivalent of war. And after two years of fighting, America is still losing.

Efforts have been made to broaden our oil dependency to a larger number of exporting nations but a broader dependency does not solve the basic problem — dependency itself. Now that world oil supplies are being rapidly depleted and the oil exporting nations have a knife at America's throat, everyone is going to feel some pain from the problem.

Consumers will not just notice the effects of oil dependency at the gas pump. Oil price hikes will inflate the cost of petrochemicals for clothes, plastics and food. Industries producing consumer goods will have added costs for heating and production energy.

Faced with a need to cut domestic oil consumption, the adminstration took a step in the right direction by easing controls on gasoline prices. The relaxation of regulations will add to the increase in prices but creates an opportunity for the oil companies to attack the real problem.

The government's permission to pass on to consumers a greater percentage of gas-production cost will give energy corporations more funds necessary for domestic oil exploration and research for alternative energy sources. The administration should now encourage oil firms to accelerate such research and exploration projects.

Consumers may have to suffer a little more, but the extra pain now is better than the possible problems of continued oil dependency. At the most recent meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the head of the oil cartel announced that future oil sales should be linked to efforts oil importing nations make to bring about a Mideast settlement favorable to the Palestinians.

The United States should make every effort to avoid being forced into complying with such blackmail tactics. It doesn't matter whether such threats concern the Palestinian controversy or some other issue. But our impotency against possible OPEC political efforts is a serious matter.

If energy corporations effectively use their added funds in research, a solution to the dependency problem may be found. Carter and the Department of Energy should provide even greater incentives for research and exploration.

Present trends threaten children

On the subject of children, a (childless) high school teacher told his class: "I'll never have any. I loathe them. I don't want any beady-eyed water rats spitting strained turnips across my table."

Largely due to a growing number of people like him, the United Nations has designated 1979 as the International Year of the Child. It couldn't have come at a better time.

Today's child is threatened as never before. The misbehaving little boy showed a keen sense of awareness when he responded to his confronting father, "You just don't know how tough it is to be a kid."

It is tough to be a kid these days, paradoxical as the statement may seem. Though they will never face a three-mile walk to school through knee-deep snow, today's young will have a different, and in many ways, more challenging path to follow. Materially, we have lavishly endowed our offspring; spiritually and morally (collectively) we have left them paupers.

A number of factors contribute to the "threatened" condition of millions of children. Among them:

The family unit is under siege, and children are caught in the crossfire. A recent Doonesbury carton pointedly depicted the "nuclear family" as a vanishing breed. Contrary to the situation just one generation ago, having large families is now a stigma — not something to be proud of.

Values in the family unit are undergoing rapid change. Lance Murrow, in his Time magazine essay, commented on the situation. "Children are no longer considered a necessary and inevitable part of marriage." More women, including over 50 percent who have children, are working. Then there is the clamor for population control and "the urgency of women's rights." Murrow states that "Having children often seems to have been trivialized to the status of a life-style — and an unacceptable one."

Many children are unwanted. In a survey taken not long ago by columnist Ann Landers, more than 70 percent of the 50,000 parents responding said, given the choice again, they would have no children. Many said that, considering the substantial investment required to have children, it wasn't worth it. Surely, this attitude is reflected in the steadily declining birth rate nationwide, and the rapid increase in legal and illegal abortions.

Many parents are unprepared to have children. Well over a half-million children are born to teen-agers each year, a large percentage out of wedlock. Adolescents, still in the growing and developing process themselves, suddenly find themselves as parents. Though requiring no preparation by law, being a parent is one of the greatest responsibilities ever undertaken. Children are bound to suffer when parents are uneducated and unprepared.

Child abuse is reaching epidemic proportions in many places. Well over one million children are victims of what specialists call "serious physical abuse" each year. BYU Professor Brent Hafen, in his book Child Abuse and Neglect, says children have a "right" to grow up free of abuse. Still, this right is infringed every day, even in predominantly-Mormon Utah Valley.

Another gruesome example of abuse comes in the form of child pornography, which involves more than 25,000 children by one estimate. Many of the children have been sold or rented by their parents solely for this purpose.

Happily, most children are loved and well cared for. They are given the security and stability so desperately needed in childhood. But many are in serious trouble, and deserve our attention and efforts to improve their plight.

It is hoped that the International Year of the Child will prompt enactment of social programs and legislation toward this end.

Candidates hinder votes

It seems that some candidates positions in the ASBYU hierarchy during this year's primaries, are more terested in getting elected than allowing the student body a greater portunity to participate in ASB elections.

Plans called for 15 on-campus voti locations during the primaries. N there are only seven. According to P Brown, elections committee chairma there were not enough bodies to m that many booths. So with organized plan in hand the electio committee went to the candidates an effort to keep all the booths ope

Brown said all but one of the ca didates agreed to help supply t needed bodies and were told that ea voting area would be manned workers supporting opposing ca didates insuring no tilting of supp one way or the other.

But then, the wheels of politi minds began to turn. If there w fewer voting booths — lines would longer at the polls. If there were lon lines — waiting would be discouragi to students. If students were d couraged from voting — only th who had a vested interest in the o come of the elections would vote. T majority of students with a vested terest in the outcome are those worki on campaigns. Then it becomes a ga of who has the most campaign worke

Brown said that one candidate tually told him this was one of t reasons he didn't come up with t bodies to run the booths.

This is why student government too often reflects the attitudes of th "elite" who cluster themselves arou the office holders and not the stude at large. If our local student gove ment is going to reflect student desir it must be composed of students w are interested in representing the "e tire" student body.

Oaks avoids stereotype

President Dallin Oaks is a man great dignity. But even with t dignity, he avoids the "stuffed shi image. Cosmo's unveiling ceremony the Colorado State game was g evidence of that.

A big black coffin was carried o the gym floor. The music of "Ki Tut" began, and Cosmo, wearing a t ban, was carried in on a throne a seated on the other side of the floo

To the sound of a spooky creaki noise, the coffin lid slowly began open. A mummified Cosmo stepp out, and when unwrapped, a "beheaded," who appears but Dal Oaks, making the "we're number on sign with outstretched arms!

It was great therapy for stereotype of the "administrative st fed shirt," to see a man whom I este as a great leader, out on the floor w the Cougar mascot!

President Dallin Oaks has not o earned our respect, but I believe he h proved himself to be "one of us."

B-ball a la Kentucky

Editor:

I am a senior from Kentucky and after three years of frustration I can say I'm glad I spent this last basketball season in Provo. In Kentucky there is only one thing more important than one's political or religious affiliation and that's which team he supports on the hardwood.

With this in mind I kind of chuckle when I hear of avid basketball fans in Utah. For the past three seasons I have become extremely homesick for some good basketball. Well, I think after this season and especially after the San Diego State game I have been well paid for all those years of frustration. A strange thing happened Thursday night. After Danny Ainge sank those two freethrows with seven seconds left, people all over the Villa where I live went wild. There were screams and fireworks and people dancing in the street. I thought I was back in Kentucky for a minute. It was great. I just want to say to the team and coach. I'm not homesick anymore.

Theater has worth

Editor:

I would like to agree wholeheartedly with a recent editorial about Mask Club. And to help the authors' cause, I would like to suggest shows to do in the near future for Mask Club. "Bunny Fufu and the Misfits," "The Little Troll Without a Soul," etc... What do you really want? I came to this school to learn how to act. Why do you come here to complain about the Theater? At BYU we have done Shakespeare, which is a bloody form of Theater. Are you offended? The play "Sam Brannon" was full of worldly flamboyancy. Are you offended? The theater is full of the world, from the incest of Oedipus to the rape of Lavinia, to the ways of the "Devil's Disciple," to the prostitution of "The Three Sisters." If all this offends you, do as Harry Truman suggests, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

Brigham Young said, and I quote, "Upon the stage of the theater can be represented in character, evil and it's consequences ... The stage can be made to aid the pulpit ..." If you are ashamed of your prophet, perhaps you came to the wrong school.

Thoughtless remark

Editor:

This morning in my communications class we had some presentations by ASBYU candidates. After the candidates had left the room, the teacher got up and made a few skeptical remarks concerning ASBYU in general. Fine, big deal. He went on, however, and made a derrogatory generalization about one of the candidate's campaign points. Essentially, what he said was, when a person says he is going to do such and such, he is a such and such type of person. The teacher probably did not intend to turn the class against the candidate, but he did, nonetheless. Teachers can have a lot of influence on students' unformed opinions. One thoughtless remark can undo a lot of hard work.

Must examine promises

Editor:

The coming elections will be the third I have participated in at BYU. The past two have taught me that many promises are made that cannot possibly be fulfilled. This has raised the question in my mind as to what these candidates have a right to promise?

Since the views on certain issues are the important things to consider about each candidate, I think that we, the voting student body, should know the specific responsibilities of the different offices. I would rather base my electoral decisions by comparing the promises to the office responsibilities than simply picking a promise that sounds good.

Perhaps the Daily Universe could print the responsibilities of each office so the student body can make more educated decisions.

Class A damage

Editor:

We honestly can't believe what happened today. As we returned to our parked car after a hard day of work and school we noticed a large dent and scrape across the bottom of our car door. The responsible party did not leave any information about contacting them to take care of the problem.

Our car was in the Administration Building parking lot, so most likely the individual who hit us had an "A" parking sticker and is thus a full-time faculty or staff member and probably a member of the church in good standing or at least an individual with high standards. If this is the case we don't know how the individual could rationalize this action and we hope this person's conscience is a great source of worry and concern at this time, for definitely this individual has done wrong.

Our car is barely a year old and heaven knows how much we have to pay each month for the privilege of calling it ours. With our limited salaries we cannot afford for both this, the repair bill, taxes and an expensive move after graduation.

Of all the places in the world where a dishonest incident like this should not occur it is here at BYU. We would greatly appreciate the individual who hit our burnt-orange colored Toyota to come forward and notify us, therefore, both relieving a troubled conscience and our financial woes and bad feelings. The least you can do is to help us correct the problem and concerns you have caused us.

TV replay fans

Editor:

We wish to thank Channel 11 and the Cougar Club for televising the BYU basketball games this past season. We decided as a family that we would stay up and watch all the basketball games we won. We got to see 24 winning home games, 12 in the Marriott Center and 12 at home on TV following the game. The real climax came watching the San Diego State game, first live Thursday evening, then again Saturday afternoon.

This has been a really great season, thanks for making it even that much greater.

Fifth floor funny

Editor:

For weeks now I've had this obsession to comment on some of the rude behavior portrayed by certain individuals in the library.

Once, while on the fifth floor, my friends and I were boisterously discussing the latest in Polish jokery. All of a sudden, we were rudely interrupted by some obnoxious person telling us to "shut up" because he and others were trying to study. It could readily be seen that this individual had come to a hasty generalization; he was the only one on the floor trying to study.

For the two or three of you who want to study, I really wish you'd find some place besides the fifth floor of the library.

Television hits all-time low

Well it's finally happened. Television has stooped to its lowest. It can now be ranked among those forms of entertainment that do nothing to stir men's souls to good.

CBS has announced plans to air a movie entitled Flesh and Blood in the spring.

The movie is about a mother's love affair with her son. One TV critic described the movie this way: "Suzanne Pleshette stars in an adaptation of Peter Hamill's controversial novel, 'Flesh and Blood'; it will probably bring a storm of protest to the network's doors. Ms. Pleshette plays a sexy woman who has a love affair with her tough boxer son, played by Tom Berenger."

It looks as though Ms. Pleshette has abandoned her career as the sweet cynical thing of Disney and Bob Newhart fame for a more sickly perverse role as a partner in incest.

Scott Clawson, KSL program director, said his station doesn't have to carry the movie (scheduled for May 8) during it's "live" time. It can elect to delay the broadcast or not show it all. This decision, Clawson says, rests upon himself and the managing director of KSL. If they decide the program is unfit for public viewing, or if it is "something the community can't handle," Clawson said it will not run.

It is to be hoped that the station will use better judgment and not show what will surely prove to be a strip of celluoid junk.

Why does this type of a decision have to be made at the local level? Can't the networks themselves decide what is worthy of public consumption? Obviously not.

This is not the first time KSL has had to consider the cancelation of a program offered by CBS. Clawson said many times, because of violence and sex, they have chosen not to show certain programs.

If the networks knew, or maybe more importantly if the advertisers who pay the bills knew, that the American public does not want to be subjected to such trash, it wouldn't be shown. But once more in America the majority of citizens who are opposed to this type of "entertainment" are doing nothing.

Unless the majorities get off their "satisfied" duffs and begin to take control of the world around them, ugly forces will make this an uglier world.
